DRAMATIC ENTRANCE

A contemporary abstract painting by Adam Siegel—one of the owners' favorite artists—hangs above an ancient Chinese bench that heralds entry into the dining room and kitchen.

"I simply looked for fabulous things," Schneider says. "Everything I chose has an undertone of art, and I used Barbara's favorite color—red—to give the overall design firepower and energy." The master bedroom, for example, is dominated by a faux-bamboo bed with a dark-brown, woven-leather headboard. The floor, layered with wall-to-wall sisal in a herringbone pattern, is topped by a scarlet-hued Tibetan wool and silk rug.

The accents are a natural, as the Hucks have traveled to Singapore, Hong Kong and Thailand. Barbara is particularly fond of the monk's bed that serves as the living room's coffee table and the Tibetan offering urns that top it. Another favorite: A collection of Chinese pillows displayed across shelves in the living room. "I'm fascinated by them," says Barbara. "Some are made of carved wood; others are painted leather and wicker."

SUNKEN COMFORT

The family room, defined by the massive stone fireplace and the Adam Siegel painting on the mantel, features a contemporary sectional sofa made to sink into.
